New branding for the AEA! The AEA Board of Directors is proud to announce that the AEA's new logos, concepts, and other intellectual materials are now member benefits. You will be able to download the materials to use for your practice and promotional efforts. However, you will not be able to produce items for resale. Please read this Use Agreement carefully, sign it, and return it with your membership renewal.

Use Agreement

In consideration of acceptance or renewal of membership in the American Electrology Association, (hereinafter referred to as AEA), members are granted permission to download and use from the AEA website such images, logos, photographs, concepts, taglines, slogans, or other intellectual property or property licensed to the AEA by third parties for member use (hereinafter all referred to as material). With respect to material licensed for use from third parties, permission for its use by AEA members is granted but only within the limits for use allowed by the third party licensor.

The undersigned agrees that permission to use this material is personal to the member with no right to transfer or assign the right to download and use such material. The undersigned further agrees to completely cease and desist from the continued use of any such material upon termination, lapse, or expiration of membership in the AEA. Upon general notification by the AEA, through its website, that use of the material must be discontinued for any reason, the undersigned shall immediately remove all such material from any website affiliated in any way with the undersigned, and must immediately cease and desist from disseminating any printed or digital promotional matter containing such material.

The undersigned agrees not to alter or modify such material, or to use it in any way that, in the opinion of the AEA, is considered inappropriate. Determination of what is appropriate lies solely with the AEA. The undersigned also agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the AEA and any third parties licensing intellectual property to the AEA, from any losses, injuries, damages, costs, or expenses incurred by same, whether before or after judgment, as a consequence of the undersigned's breach of this agreement; and further agrees to be responsible for all reasonable costs incurred by the AEA and/or third parties licensing the use of intellectual property to the AEA to enforce this agreement, including reasonable attorney's fees and all other usual costs of litigation.
